machine learning ml is progressively reshaping the fields of quantitative finance and algorithmic trading ml tools are increasingly adopted by hedge funds and asset managers notably for alpha signal generation and stocks selection the technicality of the subject can make it hard for non specialists to join the bandwagon as the jargon and coding requirements may seem out of reach machine learning for factor investing r version bridges this gap it provides a comprehensive tour of modern ml based investment strategies that rely on firm characteristics the book covers a wide array of subjects which range from economic rationales to rigorous portfolio back testing and encompass both data processing and model interpretability common supervised learning algorithms such as tree models and neural networks are explained in the context of style investing and the reader can also dig into more complex techniques like autoencoder asset returns bayesian additive trees and causal models all topics are illustrated with self contained r code samples and snippets that are applied to a large public dataset that contains over 90 predictors the material along with the content of the book is available online so that readers can reproduce and enhance the examples at their convenience if you have even a basic knowledge of quantitative finance this combination of theoretical concepts and practical illustrations will help you learn quickly and deepen your financial and technical expertise

Handbook of Experimental Economic Methodology

the handbook of experimental economic methodology edited by guillaume r fréchette and andrew schotter aims to confront and debate the issues faced by the growing field of experimental economics for example as experimental work attempts to test theory it raises questions about the proper relationship between theory and experiments as experimental results are used to inform policy the utility of these results outside the lab is questioned and finally as experimental economics tries to integrate ideas from other disciplines like psychology and neuroscience the question of their proper place in the discipline of economics becomes less clear this book contains papers written by some of the most accomplished scholars working at the intersection of experimental behavioral and theoretical economics talking about methodology it is divided into four sections each of which features a set of papers and a set of comments on those papers the intention of the volume is to offer a place where ideas about methodology could be discussed and even argued some of the papers are contentious a healthy sign of a dynamic discipline while others lay out a vision for how the authors think experimental economics should be pursued this
