Survival in Simplicissimus and Mutter Courage 1997 hans jakob christofell von grimmelshausen personifies the unstable atmosphere of the thirty years war as the character courasche a chaotic cross dressing woman who through multiple marriages and a take no prisoners attitude traverses the physical landscape and social hierarchy of the war part of a trilogy of works courasche s impetus for this autobiography is a slanderous description of her after her involvement with simplicissimus his accusations of her morally bankrupt existence made in the first book of the trilogy are not countered rather accepted by bending her gender and challenging the stereotypical gender roles of the seventeenth century courasche s untamed and destructive nature is a personification of the war and a critique of women s lack of a stable place in society and lack of representative voice nearly three hundred years later bertolt brecht adapts the character of courasche transforming her into a mother of three and the personification of capitalism as the character mutter courage this is a transformation not only of genre from prose to drama but a change in narrative perspective from a first person perspective to a third person perspective creating a voice for women through this critique of capitalism brecht connects the issues of the early twentieth century to those in the seventeenth century pointing out congruent historical patterns and social circumstances a closer look at these texts will highlight their similarities of perspective and differences in agenda both working from the angle of gender dynamics and the thirty years war
