the united states has the most expensive and seemingly military forces in the world yet since world war ii its military success rate has been fairly meager the korean war was a draw vietnam mogadishu afghanistan and iraq were clear losses successes include iraq in 1991 the balkans croatia and kosovo panama the initial takedowns of afghanistan in 2001 and iraq in 2003 and libya failures have been marked by the introduction of large numbers of conventional american ground troops while successes have been characterized by the use of airpower special operations forces robust intelligence and sensor platforms and the use of indigenous ground troops the vital interests of the united states are seldom at stake instead the us intervenes to punish aggressors or topple particularly inhumane dictators as a result the us and its allies strive to maintain public support both at home and abroad one of the surest ways to lose this support is to suffer high casualties or worse inflict them on the societies we are ostensibly attempting to help the goal of limiting cost and casualties is hindered by the introduction of large numbers of conventional ground troops especially in the xenophobic societies of the middle east this desire to limit risk and cost while still achieving definable political goals results in a quandary this is not a new problem and as early as two millennia ago nations sought to achieve these dual and often contradictory goals against enemies with asymmetric strengths often nations rejected taking on a powerful enemy head to head instead belligerents launched second front operations they moved the war elsewhere to achieve local superiority not surprisingly this strategy was especially appealing to nations possessing powerful navies Britain who controlled the seas for several centuries was especially adept at using this second front strategy today we find that although second fronts may not be necessary the reasons for conducting such operations are still with us the desire to limit risk while achieving measurable goals for America that means eschewing the use of massive numbers of ground troops to invade and occupy a subject country but instead using its asymmetric strengths a combination of airpower intelligence and indigenous ground troops to achieve political goals
